

Robert (Bob) Martyn, PhD

Robert (Bob) Martyn, PhD, is affiliated with the Centre for International and Defence Policy, as well as the Cultural Studies' Interdisciplinary Graduate Program, both located at Queen's University. He has taught within history and politics programmes at the Royal Military College of Canada and Queen's University, as well as lecturing periodically at the Canadian Forces College; current research is focused upon radicalization/terrorism, intelligence, and ethics.

His previous, diverse, military career spanned four decades and saw him having worn six different coloured berets, as well as jumping from airplanes at every opportunity. The combination of deployments to Cyprus, Bosnia, Kosovo, and Afghanistan, along with his varied Canadian and international parachute and dive badges, made for an awesome looking Mess Kit. His only other claim to fame is being a Life Member of the Harley Owners' Group.
