The Fellowship Programme

DR. MEGHAN FITZPATRICK
Strategic Analyst
Defence Research and Development Canada's Centre for Operational Research and Analysis

Dr. Meghan Fitzpatrick is a strategic analyst, historian, and expert in hybrid threats, cognitive warfare, and unconventional conflict. She serves as a Strategic Analyst with Defence Research and Development Canada's Centre for Operational Research and Analysis (DRDC-CORA), an Adjunct Professor of War Studies at the Royal Military College of Canada, and a Research Fellow and Co-Pillar Lead for Hybrid Warfare and Unconventional Threats within the Conference of Defence Associations Institute's CITADELLE Network.

Dr. Fitzpatrick began her career studying the human dimensions of warfare, particularly military medicine, psychology, and soldier resilience. She earned an M.A. in Contemporary British History from the University of London and a Ph.D. in War Studies from King's College London, before holding a SSHRC Postdoctoral Fellowship at the Royal Military College of Canada. Her research resulted in Invisible Scars: Mental Trauma in the Korean War (UBC Press, 2017) and numerous publications on military psychiatry and combat stress.

Today, Dr. Fitzpatrick examines how military organizations can adapt to increasingly complex threat environments. She advises leaders across National Defence on hybrid threats, resilience, and strategic competition. Internationally, she has represented Canadian defence research across NATO and Five Eyes forums. Her contributions have been recognized with the DRDC Science and Technology Award and the CORA Award for Outstanding Achievement in Defence Analysis.
